

Translation Bridge™

Translate your content to any number of languages at once.

At Entthink we believe there are solutions to make your organization's knowledge work for your customers and users. We excel in finding solutions that bridge the complexities of technology with the expectations of the living, breathing person that uses it.

Many of today's web strategies must find effective ways to deal with globalization, manage the growing demand of additional markets, and simplify the localization process, and lowering the cost of translation is paramount. Many sites today require several languages and this vast amount of content and its organization demands finding improved ways to lower costs, process and speed up the delivery of this content.

Translation Bridge is an easy way to deal with content that needs to be translated. Translation Bridge cues your content that has been identified for translation, exports it either through schedule creation or on demand and them sent to any translation house. The content, once translated can then be easily reimported into RedDot. Translation Bridge then takes it one step further by creating all the new translated pages in each of their respective languages without any interaction of editors or administrators. With the pages being built automatically, rather than built manually, this significantly reduces your time to market.

Key benefits include the ability to:

- Lower your translation costs
- Bulk export content to be translated
- Have your Editor can tag what languages the content should be translated to
- Leverage translation memory
- Schedule ad hoc translations
- Complete a one step import of content including the automatic building of all pages
- Eliminate having to translation page by page
- Eliminate translating language by language
